Receipt of a scholarship/fellowship/traineeship from the University of Arkansas does not create an employer/employee relationship between the recipient and the University. Though an academic award may require the recipient to perform certain tasks such as preparing, monitoring or evaluating research processes or procedures, the purpose of such an award is to train the recipient in research processes and procedures and provide real world experience to the recipient. Other awards may be based on student status and/or type of academic program the student is enrolled in. The continuation of awards may be dependent on student progress in their research or academic endeavor.

Receipt of a scholarship/fellowship/traineeship from the University of Arkansas may affect (reduce) other student financial awards the recipient may have been awarded as determined by the student Financial Aid Office.

An award may not be disbursed in its entirety if the recipient has an unpaid balance on their student account.

I have read the above statements about the nature of the award and its implications and understand and agree with the terms.
